

Editor's Note

On behalf of the Editorial Board, it is with a sense of satisfaction that I present to our readers this Special Issue of Decision on “Management Education in India.” The importance of this topic and the growing need for a proper academic discussion of the content and quality of such education make it very timely and relevant. We have been fortunate to have had as Guest Editors, Anup Sinha, a professor in the Economics Group of IIMC and Sougata Ray, an associate professor in the Strategic Management Group of IIMC. With their rich and varied experiences as well as personal interest in this topic, they have brought together a set of articles that highlight key concerns in management education in India, in the twenty first century.

I would also like to draw the attention of our readers to a new feature that we have incorporated in this issue. It is the interview. It comes after all the regular articles. Through this feature, we hope to capture the thoughts and ideas of eminent people, academics as well as practitioners and policy makers, and to share them with a larger audience.

We hope that you find this Special Issue useful and thought provoking and that it generates further discussions and promotes better practices. I welcome such follow-up articles and also invite our readers to submit articles for our regular issues as well.
